

DRIFTING.

BY THOMAS HUGHAN READ.

My son-to-day
Is far away,
Sailing the Vesuvius Bay;
A bird aloft,
Swims round the purple peaks remote—
Round purple peaks
It sails and eaks
Blue inlets and their crystal creeks,
Where high rocks throw
Through deeps below,
Duplicated, golden glow.
For vain and dim,
The mountain's swim,
Whence Vesuvius' misty brim,
With outstretched hands,
The gray smoke stands,
O'erlooking the volcanic lands,
Here flocks and flocks
Of rapt and rapt,
Regulating their bright estates.
I heed not, if
My rapt and rapt
Floats with the cliff to cliff,
With dreaming eyes
My spirit lies
Under the walls of Paradise:
Under the walls
Where swells and falls
The bay's deep breast at intervals.
At peace I lie,
Blown softly by
A cloud upon this liquid sky.
The day is mild,
With Earth and Ocean reconciled;
The air I feel
Around me steal,
Are murmuring to the murmuring keel
Over the rail,
Within the shadow of the sail;
A joy to me,
The cooling breeze
Glides down my drowsy incline.
With dreamy eyes
My spirit lies
Where summer stings and never dies—
She glows and shines
Among her future oil and wines.
Her children bid
The cliffs around
Are gamboling with the gamboling kid;
Or down the walls
With tapers call,
Laugh on the rocks like waterfalls.
The fisher's child,
With tresses wild,
Unto the smooth, bright and beguiled,
With glowing lips,
Sings as she skips,
Or gazes at the far-off ships.
You deep back bays
Where traffic blows,
From lands of snow to lands of snow;
This happier one,
Its course is run,
From lands of snow to lands of sun.
Oh happy ship,
To rise and bid
With blue crystal at your lip!
Oh happy crew,
My heart with you,
Sails and sails and sings away!
No more, no more
The worldly shore
Upholds me with its wild uproar!
My spirit lies
Under the walls of Paradise!

SHARP.—The following dialogue took place on the Ohio Railroad:
"Hallo, stranger, you appear to be traveling."
"Yes I always travel when I'm on a journey."
"I think I've seen you somewhere."
"Very likely, I've been there."
"Mightn't you name be Smith?"
"Well it might—if it wasn't something else."
"Have you been long in these parts?"
"Never longer than at present—five feet nine."
"Do you calculate to remain here some time?"
"Well I guess I'll stay until I'm ready to leave."
"I reckon you were born in New England?"
"Well my native place was either there or somewhere else."
"You travel as if money were plenty with you."
"Well I might have less, and I might be richer."
"Have you got anything new?"
"Yes, I bought a new whetstone this morning."
"I thought so, you're the sharpest blade I ever saw on this road."

It won't do.
It is curious how many thousand things there are which it won't do to do on this cozy planet of ours, whereupon we eat, sleep, and get our dinnes.—For instance:
It won't do to plunge into a lawsuit, relying wholly upon the justice of your cause, and not equipped beforehand with a brimming purse.
It won't do for a man, when a horse kicks him, to kick back.
It won't do to crack jokes on old maids past the age of forty.
It won't do, when a mosquito bites your face in the night, to beat your cranium in pieces with your fist, under the impression that your killing the skeeter.
It won't do for a man to fancy a lady is in love with him because she treats him civilly, or that she has always endured his company.

It won't do to be desperately enamored of a pretty face until you have seen it at the breakfast table.

It won't do for a politician to imagine himself elected to the gubernatorial chair, while the back counties are to be heard from.

The following lines are inscribed upon the tomb of John Howard Payne, the author of "Sweet Home":

Bury when thy gentle spirit fled
To realms beyond the azure dead,
With arms outstretched, God's angel said,
'Welcome to Heaven's Home, Sweet Home!'

Taylor says courtships are the sweet and dreamy thresholds of unseen Edens, where half the world has passed in couples and talked in whispers under the moonlight and passed on, and never returned.

Never confide in a young man for new pails look. Never tell your secrets to the aged—old doors seldom shut closely.
